Dear Dr. Warden,

I heartily approve of your project of supplying "An English Handbook to the Paris Medical School," and, to judge from the preface, it promises to be extremely useful.

Yours very truly,

LISTER.

Jan. 28th, 1903.

To Dr. A. A. Warden,
9, rue Chalgrin, Paris

1729, Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

My dear Dr. Warden,

I have looked over the proof sheets of your book, "An English Handbook to the Paris Medical School." I should say that it would be a most useful handbook for all English-speaking medical students visiting Paris. If I had had such a handbook when I went there years ago it would have aided me very much in the proper selection of teachers and hospitals.

Yours very truly,

W. W. Keen.

May 5th, 1903.

*To Dr. A. A. Warden,
9, rue Chalgrin, Paris.*

PREFACE

It is extremely difficult for the foreigner to find at once the postgraduate or special medical work that he has come to Paris to pursue. He misses the centralisation that experience of other countries and schools has led him to expect. There is no central bureau of information, no publication wherein he can see at a glance and choose that which he seeks. At the Faculty of Medicine itself he finds but a multiplicity of notices and placards that serve only to increase his bewilderment. Changes are made almost annually in the personnel of the hospitals of Paris, and, perhaps for this reason, no official attempt is made, other than by means of announcements of such changes in the medical journals, to publish a handbook of more or less permanent value. Both in the winter and summer sessions, for example, courses are given by various men in their particular specialty and hospital. It is impossible, in such a small handbook as this, to take specific notice of such courses. But we may succeed in drawing the visitor's attention to them by pointing out the hour and day and hospital where such a specialist may be found. The visitor will then, upon the spot, easily inform himself of the special course that may happen to be in progress at the time of his visit.

My endeavour, in preparing this little handbook for the use of foreign physicians, has been to restrict myself to the information they usually require, while at the same time giving a fairly complete account of the details of scientific medical education in Paris.

Thus, under the name of each hospital I give its position in the city and the means of reaching it, the professors, physicians and surgeons, who have wards in it, and the days and hours of their visits and lectures. These details I recapitulate in a table in the form of a diary, giving for each day of the week the lectures, operations or ward visits, and the hours at which they are held.

Lastly, I add some details in connection with museums and libraries, medical societies and their meetings, the practice of medicine in France, the Pasteur Institute, the Institute of France, etc. I also append a list of the English and American physicians who practice in Paris, and the addresses of some English trained nurses and nursing institutions.

Lord Lister, to whom I submitted the List of Contents, has honoured me with the few words of approval which, with his permission, I place as a Prefatory Letter. I desire again to thank him for his courtesy and kindness.

I must also acknowledge the help I have received from Paris Médical, the volume officially issued to members of the XIIIth International Medical Congress held in Paris in 1900, from the last edition (1900) of the Guide Médicale, published by Maloine, and from the Agenda Médical, issued by Asselin et Houzeau, from the Annuaire Civile et Militaire, and other directories.

Should this little volume enable some of my English and American confrères to make a more interesting and profitable sojourn in Paris than they otherwise might have, I shall be more than repaid for the time spent in the compilation of these details. It is a privilege to attempt to spread the name and fame of Paris, and to make known opportunities that are perhaps insufficiently appreciated.

9, Rue Chalgrin,
March, 1903.

P.S.—The Municipal Council of Paris has voted a sum of 3,000 francs to open an “Office of Medical Information,” which will probably be situated at the Faculty of Medicine. The Faculty of Medicine has appointed a Committee to consider the project, and Professor Pozzi, its Secretary, has made a favourable report. He points out—in January, 1902—the necessity of such a bureau, the simplicity and economy of its organisation, and emphasizes the contrast that at present exists between the facilities offered to foreigners in Berlin and Vienna and the difficulty they experience in Paris. This Bureau de renseignements médicaux will have the telephone, and some one will always be present to give information upon any points in connection with medical education and instruction in Paris. At the time of writing—March, 1903—this bureau does not yet exist.

THE FACULTY OF MEDICINE*

The Faculty of Medicine, formed by the Professors and the Assistant Professors, or Agrégés, has its meetings at No. 12, Rue de l'École de Médecine. Professor Debove, the Dean, receives on Wednesdays, at 9; M. Grisez, the Secretary, on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, from midday to 1 o'clock, and from 2 to 3.

(b) THE AGRÉGÉS, or Junior Professors, are appointed by competitive examination for a period of nine years, but after this period of active service, may continue in hospital or teaching posts. Those in active service are:—

Achard, Auvray, Besançon, Bonnaire, Aug. Broca, André Broca, Chassevent, Cunéo, Demelin, Desgrez, Dupré, Faure, -Gilles de la Tourette, Gosset, Gouget, Guiart, Hartmann, Jeanselme, Langlois, Launois, Legry, Legueu, Lepage, Marion, Mauclair, Méry, Potocki, Rémy, Rénon, Richard, Rieffel, Teissier, Thiéry, Thiroloix, Thoinot, Vaquez, Wallich, Walther, Widal, Wurtz.

THE AGRÉGÉS LIBRES, i.e., those whose term of active service has expired, are:—

Albaran, André, B. Anger, Ballet, Bar, Blum, G. Bouchardat, Brun, Bucquoy, Campenon, Charrin, Chauffard, Cruveilhier, De Lannessan, Delbet, Delens, De Seynes, Duchaussoy, Dugnet, Empis, Fauconnier, Fernet, Gley, Guebhard, Guéniot, Hallopeau, Henriot, Heim, Hérard, Humbert, Jalaguier, Léon Labbé, Lancereaux, Lécorché, Lejars, Letuille, Lutz, Marfan, Marie, Mæygrier, Menétrier, Monod, Naquet, Nélaton, Netter, Orfila, Perier, Peyrot, Quénu, Reclus, Retterer, Reynier, Ribemont-Dessaignes. Richelot, Ricard, Rigal. Albert Robin, Roger. Schwartz, Marc Sée, Sébileau, Paul Segond, Troisier, Tuffier, Villejean, Weiss.

(c) THE PRACTICAL SCHOOL is situated opposite the building of the Faculty.

The Anatomy Department consists of eight rooms, each capable of accommodating ninety students. Here dissections are carried on, and operative surgery practised from October till June, the latter under the direction of Dr. Hartmann. Special practical courses are given. Thus in April and May, at 1.30 p.m. daily, there is a post-graduate course of operative surgery on the male genito-urinary tract. Anatomy is under the direction of Dr. Rieffel, assisted by eight demonstrators of anatomy appointed for a period of four years, and fifteen junior demonstrators or aides-d'anatomie.

In addition to the laboratories attached to the various hospitals, there are a number in connection with the Faculty for practical work and research, viz.:—Biology, Chemistry, Comparative Pathology, Physics, Pharmacology, Forensic Medicine, Therapeutics, Hygiene, Physiology, General Pathology and Therapeutics, Surgery, Histology, Pathological Anatomy, Anatomy, Operative Surgery, and Parasitology.

THE HOSPITALS

It will, of course, be possible to mention and describe only the more important of these institutions, the number of the smaller ones being legion, and presenting little of special interest to the foreigner, whose time is probably limited. It may also be added that important changes are imminent with regard to the Paris Hospitals. The Municipal Council of Paris and the Assistance Publique are discussing the means of raising funds to reconstruct a number, notably La Pitié, Cochin, Ricord, Broca, Broussais, and the Enfants-Malades, and to pull down Laënnec, Andral, Bichat, Beaujon, La Charité, the Maison Municipale de Santé, Aubervilliers, and the annex of Hotel Dieu. Plans are also being considered for the construction of a hospital for contagious diseases at Ivry, and two new hospitals on the right bank of the Seine and one on the left. We may divide the hospitals into—(a) General Hospitals; (b) Special; and (c) those for Children.

a. GENERAL HOSPITALS

HOTEL DIEU (1, Place du Parvis-Notre-Dame) Metropolitan Ry—Station Châtelet.

This is the oldest Hospital in Paris, having been founded in the 7th century by Bishop St. Landry. It has successively been called St. Christopher's Hospital, the Maison-Dieu, St. Mary's and, during the Revolution, the Hospital of Humanity. The present building was commenced in 1864 and completed in 1878.

It contains 800 beds.

HOSPICE DES ENFANTS ASSISTÉS

(Foundling Hospital).

(74, rue Denfert-Rochereau) near the Observatoire

Over 800 inmates.

The history of the care taken by the State of foundlings is a long one from the year 1552 when Parliament ordered the Lords hauts-justiciers to contribute to their support, and the noble crusade of Saint Vincent de Paul in their favour in 1638. A decree of the year II. of the Revolution gave the title Enfants de la Patrie to these children.

In the present hospital such children may be received at any age from the day of their birth to their twelfth year. They are, according to their age, handed over to a wet-nurse, sent to the country or placed in the homes of artisans and labourers.

There is also a department for the nutrition by she-asses of children with hereditary syphilis.

Physician :

HUTINEL. Daily at 9.

Surgeon :

JALAGUIER. Daily at 9.

d. INFIRMARIES OR RETREATS (HOSPICES)

HOSPICE DE LA SALPÊTRIÈRE

(47, Boulevard de l'Hôpital).

Tramways : Montparnasse-Bastille, Gare de
Lyon-Place de l'Alma.

Chiefly for Nervous Diseases in the female sex.

Founded in the reign of Louis XIII. as an arsenal where saltpetre was made. By 1636 it was abandoned and presented by Louis XIV. to the "General Hospital" which he had founded for the poor. Up to the Revolution, all kinds of patients were admitted, pregnant women, wet-nurses and their babes, male children up to five years of age, maniac, epileptics, blind and incurable. It is now a vast establishment and contains the clinical professorship of nervous diseases. There is also a training-school for nurses, for backward children, working-wards, etc. The outdoor consultation department is particularly instructive.

Physicians :

RAYMOND. Lectures Tuesday and Friday at 10.
DEJERINE. Daily at 9-30.

Surgeon :

SEGOND. Operations Monday and Saturday at 10-30.

ROUBINOVITCH. Sunday at 10.

HOSPICE DE BICÊTRE
(Rue du Kremlin) à Gentilly.

Tramway : Châtelet-Bicêtre.

Chiefly for male patients with Nervous Diseases.

Over 3,000 beds.

Few would recognise the name of Winchester in this, its corrupted form Bicêtre. And yet it was so named after John of Pontoise, Bishop of Winchester, who built a castle upon its present site.

The domain of Bicêtre was acquired later by Aimé VI, Count of Savoy and still later became the property of the Royal House of France.

The present building was erected in 1632 by order of Richelieu to receive wounded and invalid soldiers, and at the close of the 18th Century it was a home, a hospital and a prison.

Since 1883 there has been a section reserved for idiot, epileptic and backward children, in which the methods of Edward Séguin are practised in order to develop as far as possible the elements of intelligence. Dr. Bourneville has charge of this important section.

HERTFORD BRITISH HOSPITAL

(72, rue de Villiers), Levallois-Perret.

Reserved for patients of British nationality.

In January 1871, during the Siege of Paris, Sir Richard Wallace opened, for the reception of the sick British poor shut up in Paris, two wards adjoining his hospital for the wounded. In October he determined to build a hospital for British poor in Paris, to be called the Hertford British Hospital in memory of the late Marquis of Hertford.

The present building was opened for patients in April 1879 and was inaugurated by a visit from Lord Lyons, then British Ambassador. In June 1879, Their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales and Princess Victoria visited the hospital. In June 1900 Lady Wallace made it over to the British Government by deed of covenant and the present Committee of Management was appointed. The Hon. Alan Herbert, M.D., who had been physician since its commencement, resigned about this time and a new staff was appointed.

Dr. DOYEN'S PRIVATE SURGICAL CLINIC

Dr. Doyen, one of the best known surgeons in Paris, operates in his own private hospital, containing some 130 beds, at 6, rue Piccini, off the Avenue du Bois-de-Boulogne. The patients being private, it is not so easy to have access to this as to the public hospitals, but a card and letter sent to Dr. Doyen will result in an invitation to attend upon some operating-day, usually Tuesday and Friday mornings.

THE PÉAN HOSPITAL

(11, rue de la Santé).

Founded by the famous surgeon when, at the height of his fame, he was obliged by the age limit to retire from his position as surgeon to the Paris hospitals. Since his death it has been formed into a polyclinic with, in addition, beds for in-patients. Medicine, surgery and all the specialities are represented, the consultations being mostly at 10 a.m.

DISPENSARE SIMON LAZARD.
30, rue Lafontaine, Auteuil.

I mention this children's dispensary, founded some years ago by Madame Lazard, not only on account of the generally useful work done there, but more particularly because of the valuable and original work carried on by its surgeon Dr. Raoul Bayeux in infantile tuberculoses. Dr. Bayeux attends on Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 10.

PSYCHO - PHYSIOLOGICAL INSTITUTE OF PARIS

49, rue St. André-des-Arts (near the Place St.
Michel).

This is a small clinic founded for the study of hypnotism. Free consultations are given by Dr. Berillon and others on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 10. Lectures are also given on Thursdays at 5 p.m.

LES MARRONIERS

(3. Route de la Croix, Le Vésinet).

Private Home for morphine habitués.

Dr. Oscar Jennings—author of "The Cure of the Morphia Habit Without Suffering," reprinted, with additions, from the Lancet of August, 1901—has recently opened an institution where he has his patients under his own immediate supervision. This latter condition is, in his opinion, essential to the successful emancipation of the habitué. The house is a large one, and stands in its own extensive grounds. Dr. Jennings has probably a unique experience in this work, his personal researches and publications* during the last fifteen years having laid the foundation of much of the progress made in the treatment of these most difficult cases.

Dr. Jennings will welcome any English or American physician who cares to visit his establishment.

To take the complete practical course at the Pasteur Institute it is necessary to communicate with the Directors some time before hand. The course is of 3 or 4 hours daily, meets at 1 p.m., and last about 4 months.

L'INSTITUT PHYSICO- THÉRAPIQUE de PARIS

Dr. Rivière, who is the only English physician in Paris specializing in the treatment of disease by physical agents, has given this name to his remarkable installation at 25, rue des Mathurins. It is the most complete, as it is the first of its kind. It is, therefore, well worth visiting by

English and American physicians in whose countries these methods of treatment have not obtained the professional recognition and official approval that they enjoy in France. The Institute comprises the following services:

Electrotherapy—

Including every known method of applying electricity in its various forms, to the human body, by douches, baths, high frequency currents. etc.

Hydrotherapy—

All forms of baths, douches, etc., with massage, Nauheim baths.

Radiography and Radioscopy,

Thermotherapy,

Vibrotherapy—

Charcot's and all other apparatus.

Mecanotherapy—

Dr. Rivière's special apparatus.

Hydromassotherapy—

Special treatment for obesity.

Automassotherapy —

Dr. Rivière's apparatus for obesity.

Phototherapy—

Finsen's light treatment; apparatus for actinic rays in the treatment of phthisis.

Aërotherapy—

Ozone, oxygen, and sprays.

Kinesitherapy—

For spinal curvature, etc. Apparatus for the hygienic treatment of obesity by massage and for gynecological electrotherapy.

The assistants are all English and Swedish. The Establishment is open from 10 to 5 daily.

THE INSTITUTE OF FRANCE.

(Quai de Conti).

The Academy of the Sciences and the Academy of Medicine, both form sections of the Institute.

The Academy of the Sciences holds its sessions upon each Monday at 3, and annually awards a number of prizes, which carry with them the title of Lauréat de l'Académie. Among the medical sections are general physics, chemistry, botany, anatomy, zoology, medicine, and surgery.

The members of the last sections are: Marey, Bouchard, Guyon, d'Arsonval, and Lannelongue.

The Academy of Medicine, created by Royal Charter in 1820, inaugurated its new premises at No. 16, rue Bonaparte, in November, 1902. It appoints committees upon matters concerning national hygiene, such as vaccination, epidemics, etc. It holds private sittings on Tuesdays at 3, and its annual public meeting in the first fortnight in December. The President for 1903 is Professor Lancereaux; the Permanent Secretary is Professor Jaccoud.

GENERAL INFORMATION.

THE PRACTICE OF MEDICINE IN FRANCE.

To practice medicine in French territory it is necessary to hold a French degree. By the Ministerial decree of July, 1896, foreign physicians who desire such a degree must, before commencing their medical studies in France, take the qualification in general education known as that of Bachelier de l'enseignement secondaire classique (lettres philosophie), and the certificate of studies in chemical and natural physics. No concession is now made to foreigners in virtue of any medical degree or distinctions they may possess, other than French.

For an honorary degree of M.D. of Paris, which does not carry with it the right to practice in France, considerable concessions are made. Comparatively few foreigners, however, have taken advantage of this degree.

The Medical Session in Paris lasts from November 3rd to July 31st, with one week's vacation at the New Year and a fortnight at Easter.

In the Summer special classes are usually organised, and are announced in the medical journals.

Entrance to Lectures is free, with the exception of those few courses that the Council of the Faculty may have reserved to students. Foreign physicians are, as a rule, admitted to any clinic or lecture, but they may obtain an entrance card from the Secretary of the Faculty. This card is provided gratis. A similar card for the hospitals may be obtained at the Secretary's office of the Assistance Publique, 3, Avenue Victoria. These tickets are seldom required, a physician's visiting card being, as a rule, sufficient passport.

PRIVATE NURSING INSTITUTIONS.

Neither in hospital nor in private practice in France has professional nursing reached the standard that it enjoys in England and America. In recent years, however, determined efforts have been made in this direction, and there are now in Paris many institutes from which nurses, male and female, may be obtained. Such are—The Infirmiers de la Charité, 6, rue Oudinot; the Société Générale des Garde-malades de Paris, 45, rue du Bac; at 51, rue de Provence, etc.

There are also a number of English-trained nurses who work in Paris, and who are largely employed not only by the English and American physicians in practice there, but also by the best French practitioners. Many of them work independently, and their addresses may be obtained from any doctor. Others work together on the co-operative principle. Among the nursing institutions in Paris are:—

Miss Hassall's, 25, rue d'Amsterdam,
Miss Kirkham's, 2, rue d'Aguessau,
Miss Maclean's, 190, Boulevard Haussmann, and
The American Graduate Nurses, at 6, rue Freycinet.

There are also a number of private surgical and nursing homes, among the best of which are:—

Dr. Defaut's, 50, Avenue du Roule,
Dr. Accolas', 6, Boulevard du Château,
Dr. Doyen, 6, rue Piccini,
Dr. Bisserié, 13, rue Montaigne,
Dr. Couromenos, 6, rue Châteaubriand,
Dr. Oberthür, 10-16, rue Boileau,
Dr. Rous, rue du Sergent Holf, au 37, rue Demours (Surgical),
Dr. Rivière, 25, rue des Mathurins (Electricity, etc.),
Dr. Sollier, 145, Route de Versailles (Nervous, etc.),
Dr. Barbet, 58, Boulevard Victor Hugo (Surgery), and a surgical home at 23, rue Bizet, where Sisters (Réligieuses) are the nurses. French nurses and ambulances are supplied by the Society Ambulances Parisiennes, 59, rue de Châteaudun.

DIRECTOR - - - - DR. LEREDDE

Patients with troublesome diseases of the skin do well to enter a private home and put themselves under the immediate care of a specialist with skilled and specially trained nurses. The dressings are done carefully, the details of hydrotherapy or electrotherapy and régime, etc., carried out.

The "Établissement Dermatologique de Paris" is so organised as to be able to treat all diseases of the skin by modern methods. Patients may attend for douches, phototherapy, electricity, etc., without taking residence. Treatment can be given at home by trained nurses under Dr. Leredde's superintendence.

LÜER SYRINGE

Made entirely of Crystal, no attachments of any kind, in new metal box for sterilisation by boiling,

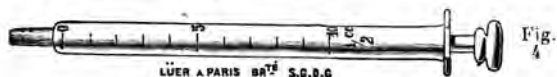

This syringe—the only really sterilisable syringe—presents the following advantages:

1. Its simplicity and easy sterilisation.
2. It is unaffected by acids, alkalis, etc.
3. Its perfect graduation and solidity ensure the exactitude of the injections.
4. The piston, being of crystal, is unalterable and always ready for use without any lubricant or preparation. It is absolutely aseptic.
